

The Ethical Blueprint for for Independent Medicine

The Garner Framework for Healthcare
Integrity and the Parallel System of the IMA.

A Declaration of Professional Independence.

The Greatest Risk is the Loss of Perspective

The root cause of systemic failure isn't always overt malice, but the subtle erosion of individual objectivity within massive institutional cultures. It is incredibly easy to become so absorbed in an organizational culture that you stop questioning directives.

“My key takeaway on ethics in healthcare is that the biggest risk isn't bad actors — it's loss of perspective.” — Greg Garner

The Institutional Conflict Map

THE CONFLICT:

Doing what is best for the patient frequently places the practitioner in direct opposition to the legal and financial guardrails of the institution.

As Garner notes, doing the “right thing” vs. “protecting your butt.”

The Anatomy of Trust Erosion

01 / Political Narratives Emerge

Medical practice becomes dictated by political expediency rather than scientific inquiry.

02 / Suppression of Evidence

Effective treatments (e.g., Ivermectin) are dismissed to protect centralized narratives and pharmaceutical interests.

03 / Policy Over Empathy

Legal guardrails prevent basic human compassion (e.g., patients dying alone on Zoom to satisfy hospital protocols).

04 / Total Collapse of Trust

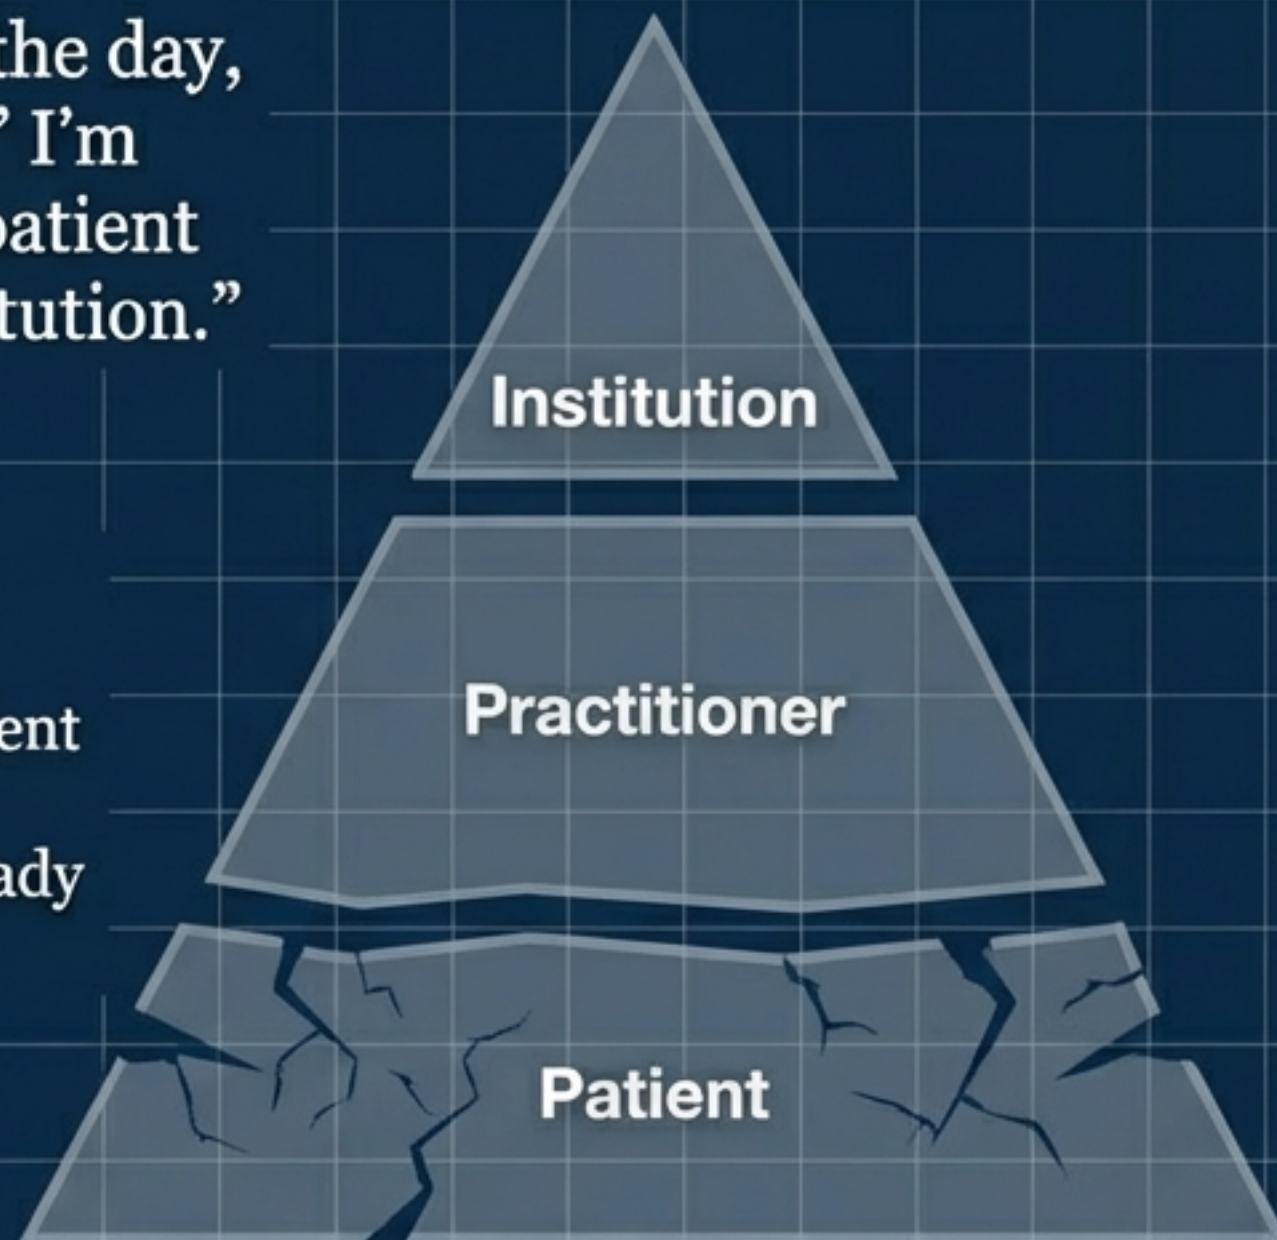

The public and the independent practitioner realize the system is no longer trustworthy.

Trust is not blind; it is earned through a history of evidence and action. When institutions demand 'blind trust' without accountability, the system breaks.

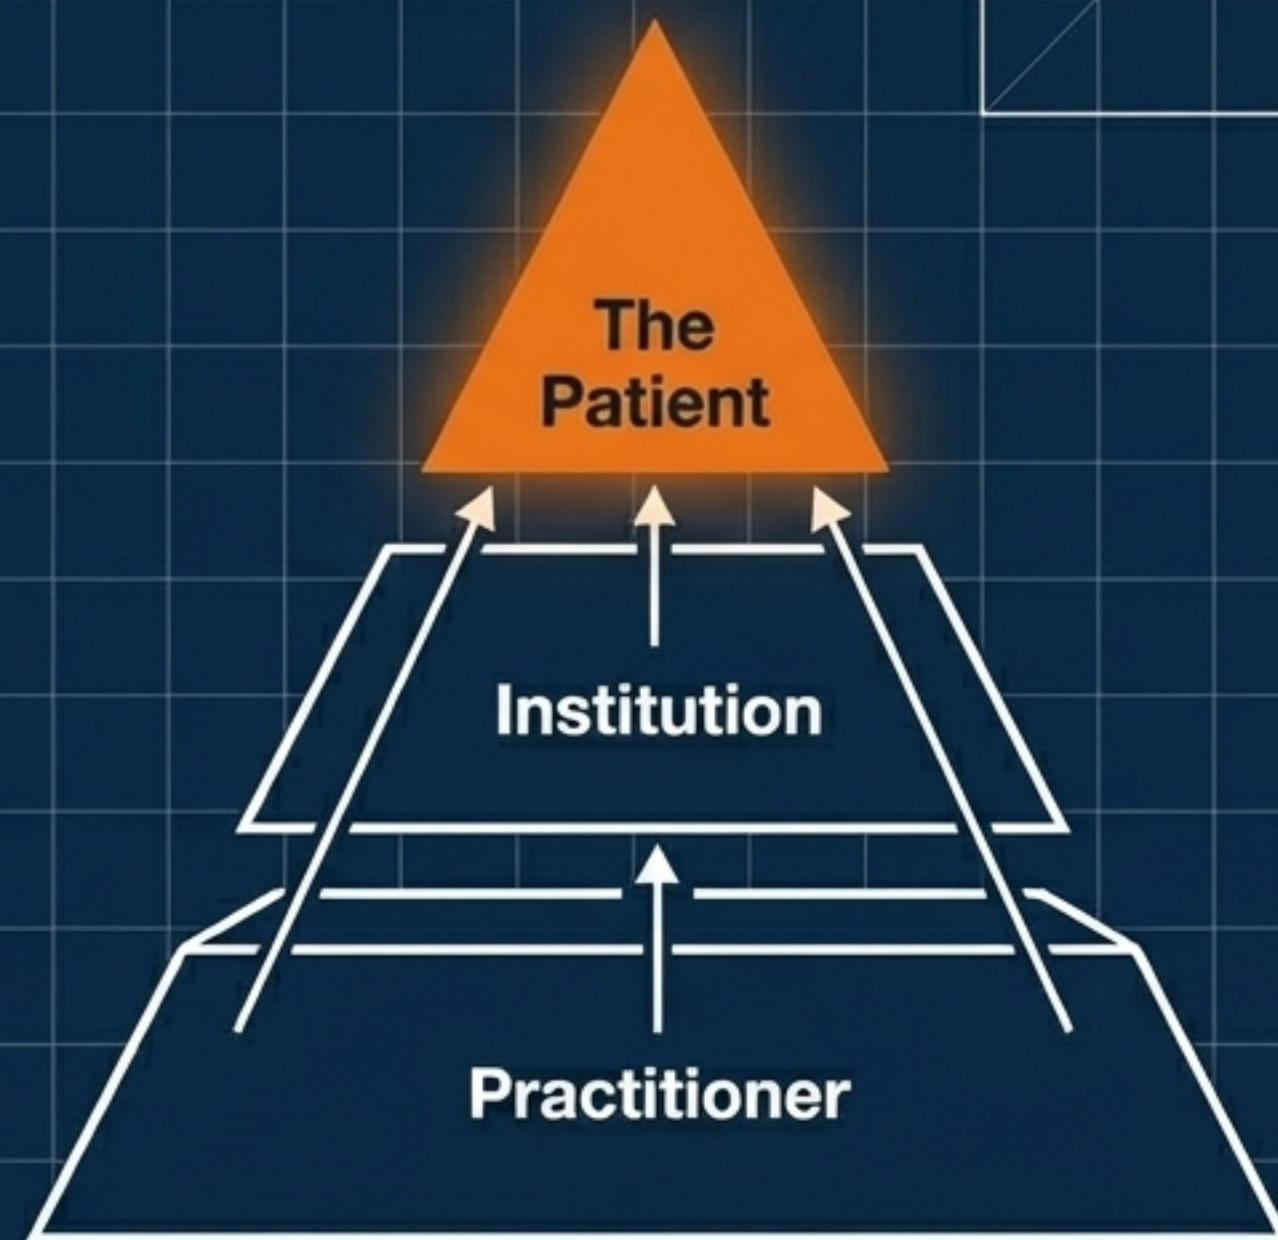

Redefining the Brand We Ride For

“At the end of the day, the real ‘brand’ I’m serving is the patient — not the institution.”

If loyalty to the organization and loyalty to the patient ever conflict, the answer must already be decided.

The Broken Model

The Garner Model

The Compliance vs. Conscience Diagnostic Matrix

	The Institutional / Corporate Model	The Garner / IMA Ethical Model
Primary Loyalty	The Entity / Hospital	The Patient
Role of HR & Legal	Protect the organization from liability	Protect the truth and support the practitioner
Decision Metric	Policy adherence & Profit	The "Own Money/Own Business" Test & Clinical Evidence
Response to Bad News	Suppress or re-code	Confront directly and course-correct
Leadership Standard	Demanded Trust ("Trust the Ivy League")	Earned Trust (Evidence-based integrity)

Defining the Dealbreaker in Advance

Threshold Graph

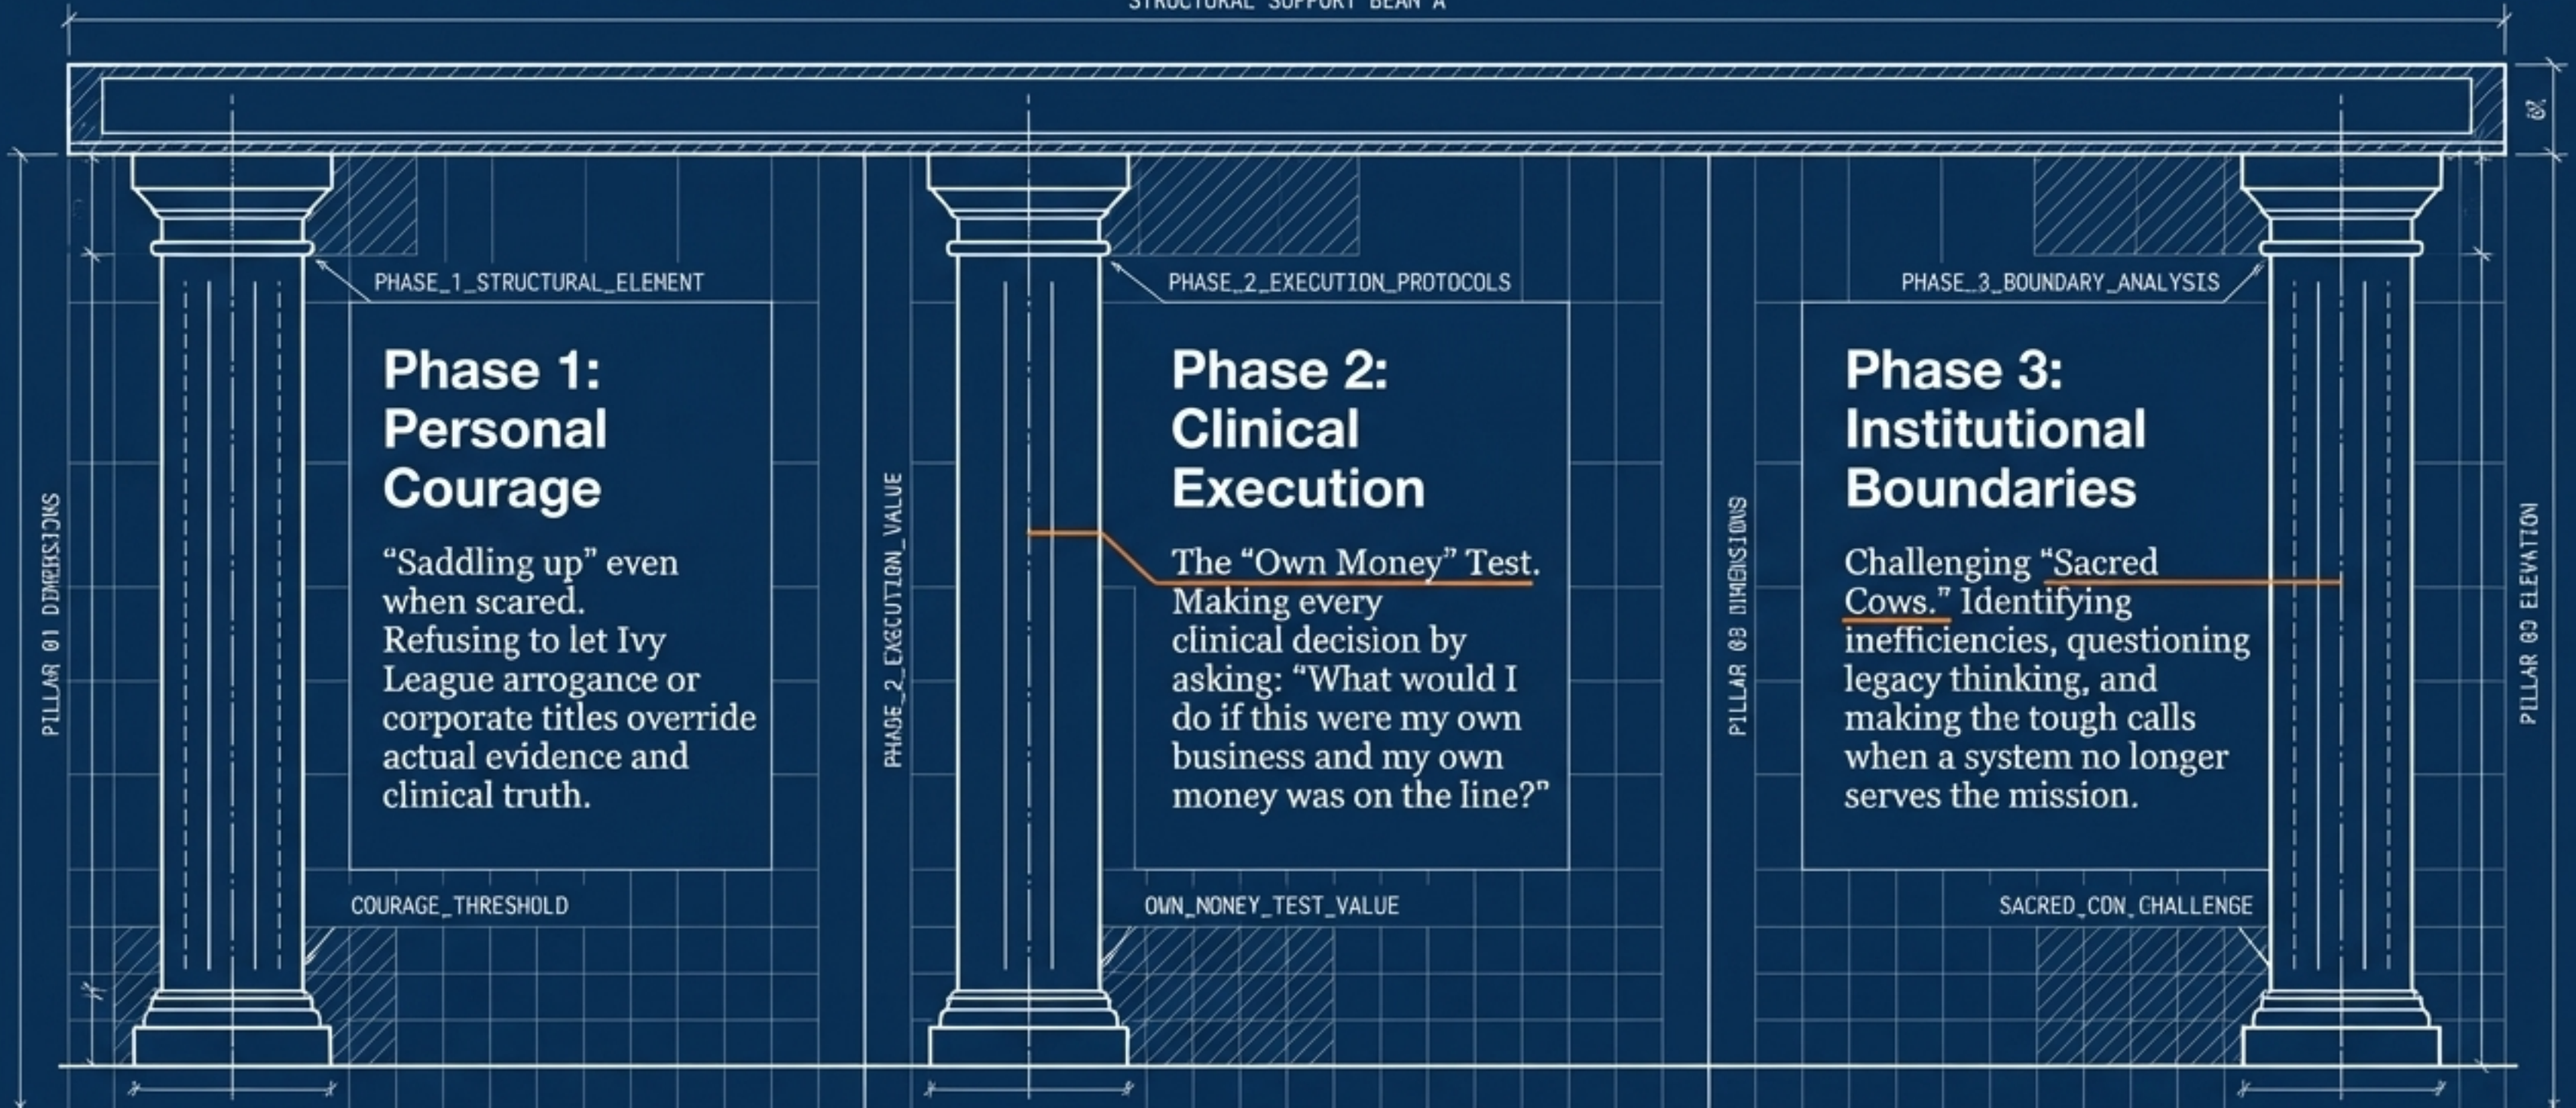

- You cannot wait until the moment of extreme pressure to decide what is right.
- If you are asked to misrepresent data, compromise care, or lie, the answer must be an automatic “No.”

“Ethics has to be pre-decided. Otherwise, when the pressure comes, you hesitate, you rationalize, or you compromise.”

— Greg Garner

The Operational Code of Conduct

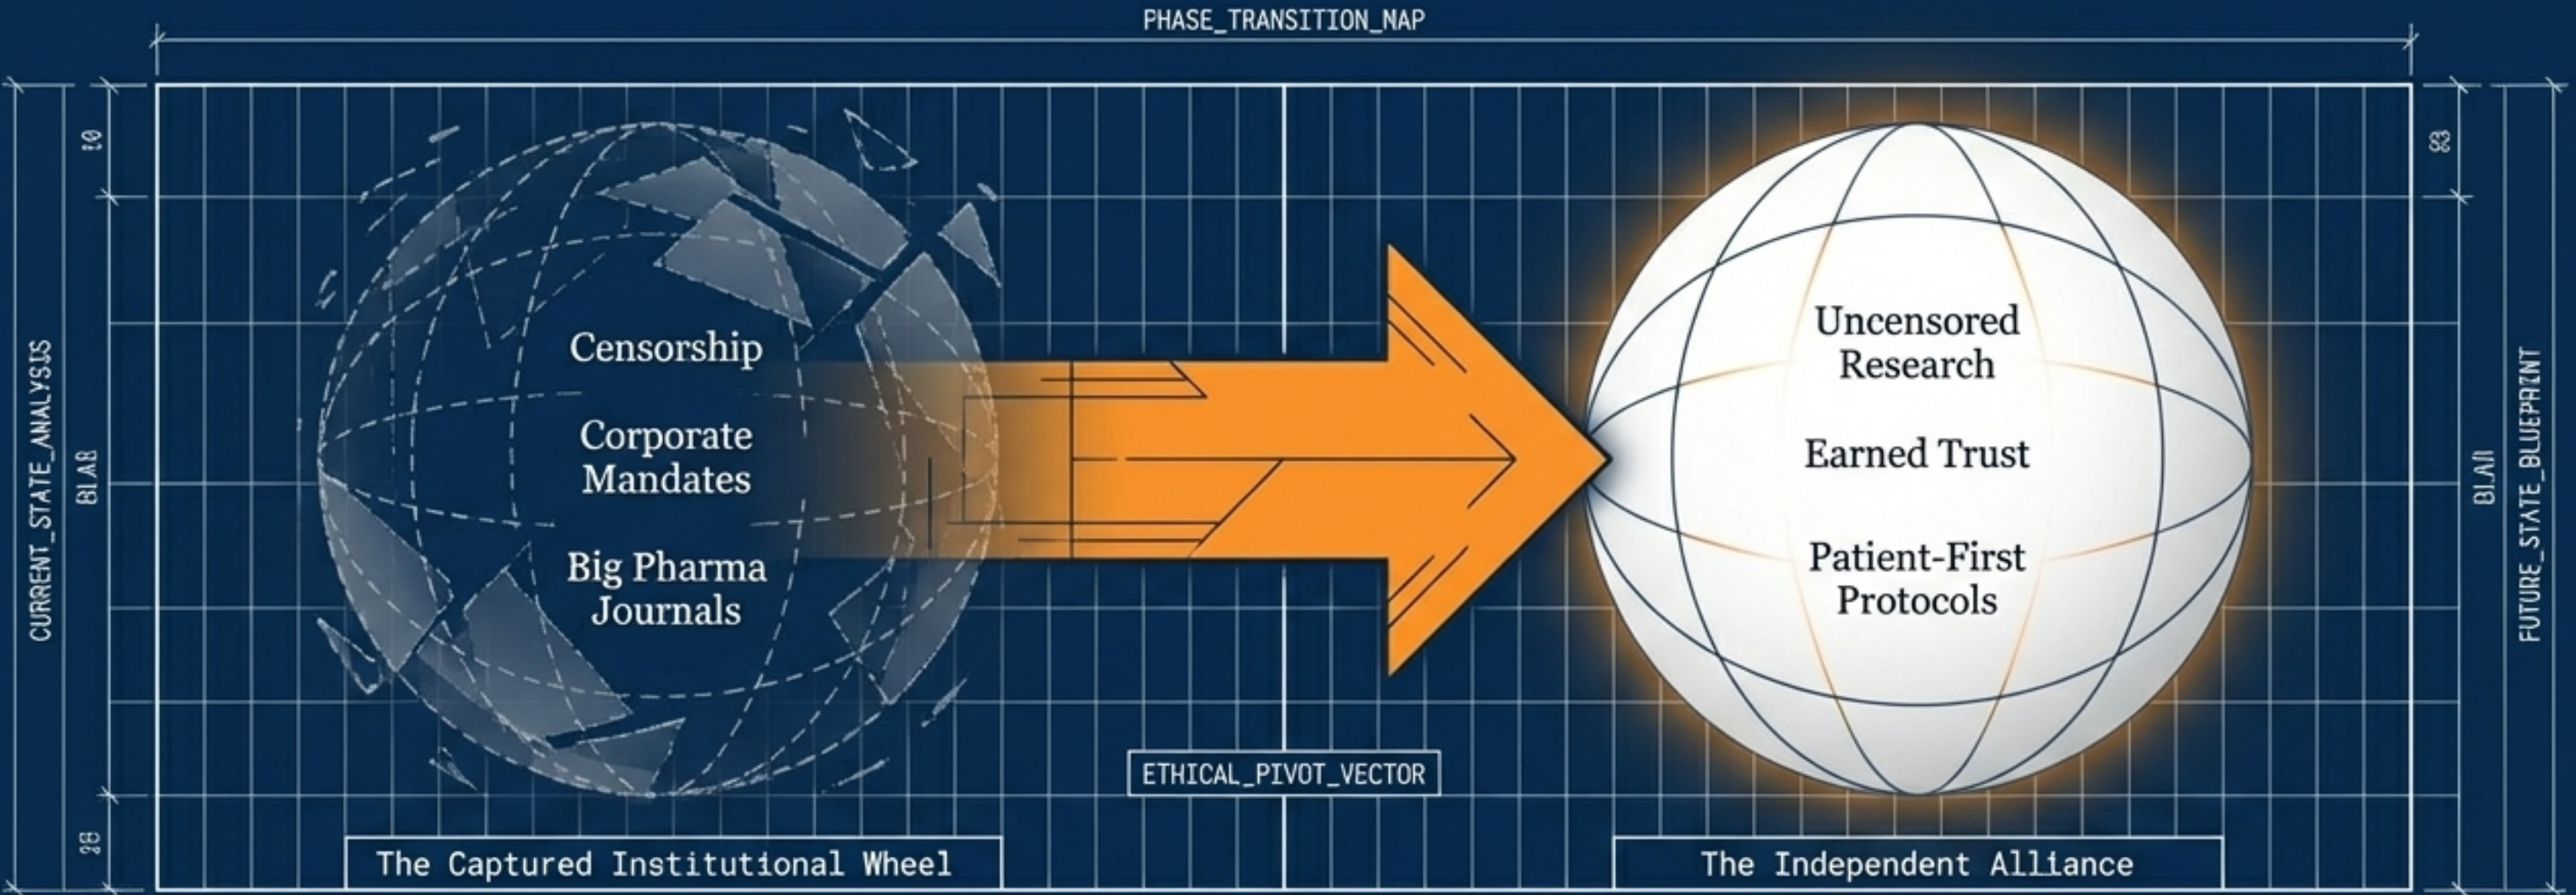

STRUCTURAL SUPPORT BEAM A

“Courage isn’t neutral — it spreads.
Courage is contagious. When one person holds the line, others notice.
Others follow. The opposite is also true — weakness spreads just as easily. Staying is a decision.”
— Greg Garner

Daring to be a Daniel means standing firm in the lion’s den of institutional mandates.
But you do not have to stand alone.

The Parallel System Pivot

The Problem:

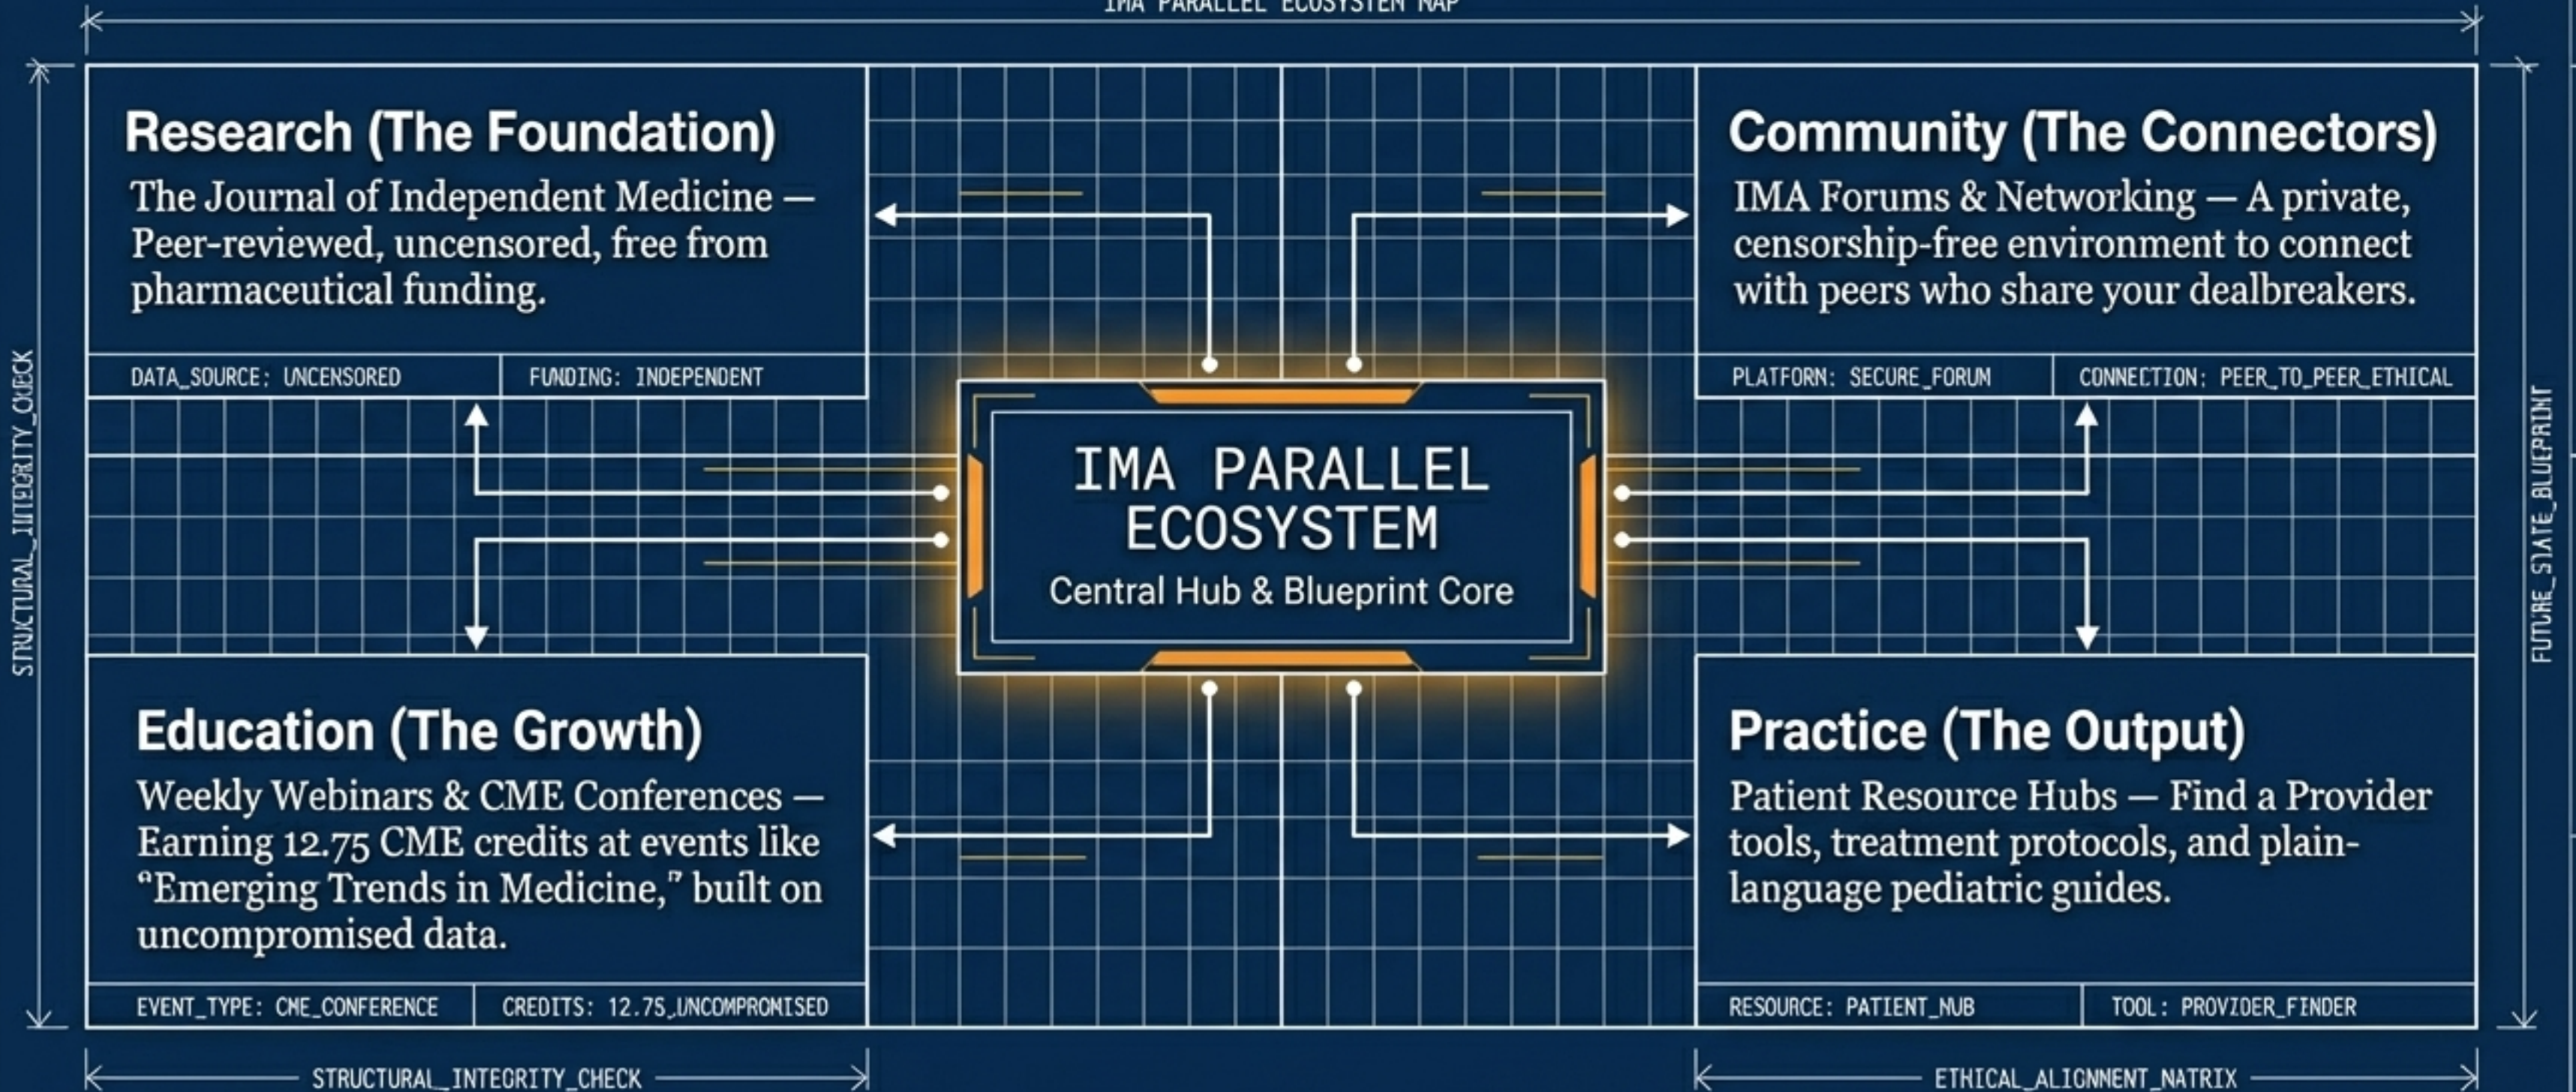

If you hit your dealbreaker and walk away, you risk isolation.

The Solution:

You don't just walk away; you walk toward a parallel ecosystem built on these exact ethical blueprints.

Accountability as a Foundational Step

Ethical leadership cannot exist without accountability. Restoring trust requires confronting the systemic failures of the past six years.

Backed by the IMA, the Brownstone Institute, and over 20,000 signatories.

- Not about revenge, but about objective truth.
- Restoration of professional integrity.
- Rigorous, independent ethical review.
- Preventing future violations of informed consent.

What would healthcare look like tomorrow if 10,000 independent practitioners stepped forward, held the line, and operated purely on Cowboy Ethics and clinical truth?

The parallel system is already built. We are looking for the leaders to populate it.

Read the Member Ethics Declaration, sign the COVID Justice Resolution, and claim your place in the parallel system.
